

ABSTRACT

The present invention minimizes the impact of driver habits and/or external events that lead to traffic congestion problems, by regulating the vehicle speed and spacing through controls that are either physical or electronic and received by the vehicle.